Bears take their first steps on soil

On September 22, PrideRock Wildlife Refuge invited board members and members of the press to watch as their three North American black bears, Rowdy, Coco and Toro, took their first steps on soil. It was a monumental day for PrideRock owners and staff who were laughing and crying, and awed as they watched these amazing animals experience a more natural home. Above, Toro is trying to figure out how to get on her new platform.

At right, Rowdy, who still hasn't shed his winter coat, inspects a log before deciding if he should climb up to his platform.

The bears are still cautious of their hammocks, platforms and logs but we are hopeful they will enjoy them soon.

Stay tuned for more cute and fun bear photos!
